Alameda, California used to have a large Naval base on the shores of the island. After the base shut down I spotted several cars languishing behind the boarded up barracks. This ALLEY FIND 1961 Ford Country Sedan station wagon was one of the better condition cars biding its time in back of the old mess hall. Slowly businesses have begun to rent out the abandoned buildings on the Alameda base and gradually by 2015 the abandoned cars on the base faded away including this one which looks good enough to have been put back into daily service.

Sharp eyed readers may ask why the license plate has not been erased in this particular instance. The plates are 1956 plates that were transferred from a prior vehicle and affixed to this wagon back in 1961 likely by the original owner. The plates are long expired and hence do not reveal the current owner's information.
